My city is a very beautiful and comfortable place to live. But as in other countries in my country there are several problems. For example, we often have mini-crimes, as well as quite a few homeless people.

If I were a mayor, first of all I would improve the safety of the city. I would put cameras around the city, I think there will be less crimes. I would also make special dormitories for the homeless, as well as, if possible, fix them to work. Because the homeless scare away tourists and locals.

I think it would improve my city for the better. But if there was only one thing I could do, I would improve the safety in the city, since that is more important. If all this is done, people in my city will live happily.
