Essay by Angela 10 A

Learning online has both advantages and disadvantages.

Most people think, that online learning has more disadvantages than advantages. That is the question I need to consider.

More recently, students have encountered a new learning experience for them – online learning. Despite the fact, which most students are not used to learning online, there were also those who liked it. Thanks to online learning, students are self-educated, which is important in the modern world. It is also undeniable, that students keep their time. A person can work at their own pace. Besides, most students feel more comfortable at home, than at an educational institution. They are less stressed, and because of this, their grades are improving.

On the other hand, online education is something new and student may face different problems. One of the biggest is discipline. Some students find it difficult to force themselves to learn, as they lack discipline and motivation. Because of this, there may be difficulties with the studies. Even during lesson, there are technical difficulties. Not all programs and websites always work, and this often complicates the learning process.

On balance, I can say despite the advantages, it is very difficult to get high-quality knowledge in online lessons. In terms of indicators, studying at school is much better, it has a more positive effect on the knowledge and emotional state of students.

Teaching Online

"You have 736 new messages!"

©1998 Randy Glasbergen. www.glasbergen.com

"You've been working awfully hard lately.
If you need a little fresh air and sunshine,
you can go to www.fresh-air-and-sunshine.com"