

Studying online has both advantages and disadvantages.

Essay by Kiril 10 A

Nowadays, due to the pandemic, everyone is working and studying online, from home. In order to decide if this is a good thing, we must examine the advantages and disadvantages of distance learning.

It is certainly true that the online learning make everyone feel confused and most students have to try very hard to learn online well, but there are also a lot of advantages. Firstly, you save your time. Previously, you had to get up much earlier to do everything in time and to arrive at school on time, whereas now you can get up ten minutes before the class, because you work at your own pace and don't need to hurry up. Moreover, sitting at home is less stressful than sitting in a class. When you are sitting at home you can drink tea or coffee, sit quite comfortable and sometimes just relax, because nobody sees you, but when you are sitting in a class it's very stressful, because you can't relax, because all are looking at you.

Zoom meeting,
audio only

Zoom meeting
with video

However, there are disadvantages too. First of all, it is not so convenient to study, because you pay your attention to others, unnecessary things, while at school you need to be attentive, because the teacher is spectating you all the time. It's also undeniable that some parents in different families can't afford necessary gadgets to study for their children, like camera, microphone, good internet connection and actually computer, laptop or tablet.

On balance, I believe that studying at school is much better than studying online, because at school students are more motivated to study, more attentive and, because of this, are able to gain exams well in future.

